Cinzia Campanini

MI 15.45 – 17.15

17.52

This course deepens the syntactic analysis of English sentences as introduced in the course 'Introduction to Linguistics'. We will proceed through the different levels of description:

- the functional level like subject, object, etc.
- the thematic level like agent, theme, etc.
- the formal level: from word classes and phrasal categories to complete tree structures, and thereby we will deal with various syntactic phenomena, both on the phrasal and on the sentential level. The seminar has a strong practical focus; the students will learn to apply syntactic argumentation themselves.

Matthias JILKAMO 15.45 – 17.15*11.62

Students will improve their skills in the pronunciation of English with respect to both actual articulation and general knowledge about sound structure (e.g., transcription, feature description of individual speech sounds). The class will concentrate on the two major major variants of English pronunciation: General American (GA) and Received Pronunciation (RP). The basis for the application of these skills will be provided by an introduction to the concepts of phonetics and phonology and the distinction between them.

FR 14.00 – 15.30

This course offers an introduction to the basic notions and methods of (generative) syntactic analysis, especially to various assumptions about the structure of sentences and different movement operations. Among the topics to be discussed are subject positions, cases of subject inversion, verbal syntax, passives, and questions. The course should enable students to identify different syntactic phenomena, to get an insight into syntactic argumentation and to enhance their skills of formulating and testing hypotheses.

Basic Phonetics and Phonology II

11.62

In this second part of the Introduction to Phonetics and Phonology we will deal with two remaining areas of phonetics, namely those concerned with the transmission (Acoustic Phonetics) and the reception/perception (Auditory Phonetics) of speech. The latter subject introduces us to the study of the suprasegmental characteristics of speech, i.e. Prosody. Finally, aspects of rhythmic and syllabic structure will be addressed in Metrical Phonology.

Optimality Theory
Credits: 5	Requirements: final exam, assignments	BA-Leistungspunkte Anglistik: 5
Lehramt (alt): G4-Proseminar + G3-Proseminar	BA HF: Aufbaumodul Sprachwissenschaft (Pr. Nr. 1630 oder 1610/1620)	BA NF: Modul 3: Sprachwissenschaft (Pr.Nr. 3210 oder 1410)

Silke FISCHERFR 09.45 – 11.15*17.12

Optimality Theory (OT) is an approach to linguistic analysis which originated in phonology in the early 1990s but was soon taken up in syntax, morphology, and other fields of linguistics as well (cf. Prince & Smolensky 1993). In contrast to many other models, it does not presuppose that linguistic rules must strictly be obeyed (or otherwise the result will be ungrammatical) – instead, OT assumes that principles are violable and ranked in a language-specific hierarchy. Thus, a grammatical form may violate a constraint X if all alternative forms come off worse with respect to a higher-ranked (i.e. more important) constraint Y. As illustration, consider the priority system for driving (cf. Müller 2002):

right before left (RbL): If you come from the right, you have the right of way.

green traffic lights (gTL): If the traffic lights are green, you have the right of way.

Scenario: Driver A and B meet at an intersection. B comes from the right, but A has green traffic lights.

Result: If the two rules RbL and gTL are in conflict with each other, the latter is considered to be more important, i.e. it is higher ranked, and as a result driver A will have the right of way (even if he comes from the left).

The aim of this course is to make students familiar with the basics of OT and discuss various OT analyses.
